

FULL BIO:

Stone Nobles formed at the University of Rhode Island in January of 2019. Its original members included Ross Mags (lead vocals, rhythm guitar), Brody Silver (lead guitar, vocals), and Davy Charr (bass). After passing through several temporary percussionists, October 2019 found the talented multi-instrumentalist, Brody Silver, stepping up to man the drums. In September of 2020, the Nobles gained lead guitarist and vocalist, Lancer Steele, who had performed with Silver in their previous band, Blynd Rooster. Solidified as a four-piece, this current Stone Nobles line-up has made a vow to the gods of rock'n'roll that wherever they may roam, heads will bang and bras will fly.

Defined by catchy, hard-hitting riffs along with Mags' wailing vocals, it's evident that Stone Nobles have taken tremendous influence from the great rock era of the 1970's. Aside from their cover of The Neighborhoods' Pure and Easy (July 2020), the Nobles have released three original songs over the course of their inaugural year. The group's greatest success to date is their second single, Child of the Night (March 2019), which has amassed over 230 thousand streams and counting on Spotify. Sandwiched between their initial release, Magnetic Woman (September 2019), and Steele's debut in Plaything (December 2020), Child has received its most recent attention in the form of a live music video, released by the quartet on Christmas of 2020.

The Nobles are currently working on multiple projects, including new music, merchandise, and long awaited live shows. June of 2021 will see the release of their fifth single, Zombie Lullaby. A high intensity, shock rock-style track, Zombie marks a change in musical direction for Stone Nobles. The single will be included in the band's first full length EP, due to release at the end of 2021. Although the title of the EP and its remaining songs are currently unreleased, expect Zombie Lullaby to set the theme.

Stone Nobles' first live performance since the COVID-19 pandemic has been scheduled for Friday, July 2 at Dusk (301 Harris Ave. Providence, RI). This 4th of July weekend celebration will also feature Jake Hunsinger & The Rock Bottom Band, New Nova, and Electric Paisan. Updates on all future events can be found on Stone Nobles official website (www.stonenobles.com) as well as their instagram (stonenobles) and twitter account (@StoneNobles).
